DEATH TAKES A HOLIDAY

There is no jubilation reported from Europe as the Spanish war ends. Fighting has ceased and official peace is in sight, but there is an atmosphere of cold cynicism.

Recognition of Gen. Franco's Nationalist government by Great Britain and France, it is understood by all parties concerned, is realistic diplomacy. It does not signify approval.

There even are hints that Italy and Germany are none too happy about the outcome. They know that Great Britain and France intend to wage financial warfare to minimize the effect of Fascism and Nazism on the Spanish peninsula.

The game of power politics which got out of control in the struggle for control of Spain will continue in a different form. Spaniards no longer will kill one another, which is a blessing, but the gloom of a futile war is not dispelled. It has changed into the prospect of peace clouded with international jealousies and more "realistic" diplomacy.

DISINTEGRATION

Hungary, it appears, now is to repeat the gradual disintegration of Austria and Czechoslovakia under Nazi pressure.

This has been reduced to a formula. First, Nazi influence is made effectual inside the country by organizing local groups. That has been done.

The influence is exerted in such a way as to force the government to take desperate measures to protect itself. That has been done.

The movement then absolves itself of responsibility for what happens, sets up its own government and invites the already established government to take action. This is being done in Hungary right now.

The final step is when the German Nazis step in to prevent the legal government from persecuting the Nazi minority. When this will happen in Hungary is uncertain. There can be no uncertainty, however, about the fact that everything is leading up to such a climax. It follows exactly the disintegration of Austria and Czechoslovakia.

Hungary is next in the push to the east—then Rumania.

THERE IS A LIMIT

With Justices Black and Reed, new deal appointees dissenting, the supreme court ruled Monday in three separate cases that employers of labor retain the right to deal with employees as they see fit, so long as the latter's rights under the labor relations act are not jeopardized.

The significance of the decisions was that employees may jeopardize their favored position under the act by engaging in sitdown strikes, failing to observe agreements etc. Employers, with no rights whatever specified in the labor relations act, long have wondered to what extent its coverage extended in the case of employees. So far there has seemed to be no limit.

The public naturally is interested in why the two new deal appointees sitting on the cases were able to see eye to eye on a dissent from what seems to be a completely reasonable position. It suggests there may be something to the suspicion that only new dealers are able to grasp the beauty of a law admittedly passed to promote a particular kind of organization at the expense of everything which threatened to interfere with it.

TAXES — AT RETAIL

The people of the United States are paying more for government now than at any other time of peace in the nation's history. They are spending about 17 billion dollars a year for that purpose—25 cents out of every dollar of their aggregate income. Their tax bill is more than they pay for food or for clothing or for shelter.

Where does the money come from? Take a look at the machinery of tax collecting and see how it works.

Taxes are a part of the cost of doing business—just as much as rent, materials, wages. These costs are covered in the price of the goods sold or the services rendered.

When taxes go up prices must go up, for no business can exist very long if its outgo exceeds its income. Taxes, therefore, are passed on down the line—not as taxes but in the form of prices. At every step in the long process by which raw materials are transformed into useful products more taxes are added.

The retailer has no choice but to pass them on to the ultimate consumer. There they stop because the consumer can't pass them on. He, then, becomes the nation's number one taxpayer. The retailer becomes the nation's number 1 tax collector. The one doesn't like being the goat any more than the other likes being the tax collector.

Taxes may be assessed on a wholesale basis—on the big fellows and the corporations—but they are collected on a retail basis. Take, a specific case. If a retailer sells a cotton dress for $7.85, the customer gets about $5.65 worth of dress and about $2.20 worth of government. That is true, more or less, of everything the customer buys.

It's not the retailer's fault. He, like all business men would like to do more business—sell more goods, hire more men. He knows he could sell more goods if he could lower his prices. He might cut down on rent or light but he cannot cut down on taxes. Those are fixed by government.

The problem is in the hands of the consumer. He can have more government and less business or more business and less government. If he wants more government he will have to pay for it.

A VERY lively and interesting day is forecast from a set of rather perplexing or complicated planetary aspects. There may be sudden and drastic change in social, romantic or business affiliations.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a very lively and interesting year, with unusual and intriguing experiences both in business and private associations. There may be a element of the vague or mysterious adding to the pleasure of social or romantic adventures, or stimulating the mental, spiritual, or creative energies and facilities.

A child born on this day may have great versatility in cultural lines, with its mental, emotional and creative facilities and forces under high and rather curious or indefinable stimuli. It may be inspired by music, poetry, art or literature, or in some peculiar romantic or spectacular manner.

A LENTEN THOUGHT

By S. TALMAGE MAGANN
President Salem Ministerial Association
A PREDOMINANT PURPOSE

Read Luke 2:41-52.
Sometimes I pause for a moment at the kitchen window to watch the boys at play on the school grounds near my home. Last week I noticed a group of them, walking in each other's tracks, as they followed the leader through a large area of untrampled snow. This observation reminded me of the Lenten season, when many Christians concentrate more definitely on the task of following Jesus.

One of His significant "footprints in the sands of time" may be described as His God-consciousness. It was a basic fact in His personal religion. At the early age of 20, He expressed it to His mother in saying, "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" This predominant purpose was the foundation on which He built the most successful and triumphant life the world has ever known.

The Christian way reveals that all of life is a part of God's business. Within each of us there are potential powers and capacities for service, love, joy and hope. These cultivated under the guidance of God will grow to help enrich all of life for us and others.

Prayer: We praise Thee, O Lord, for the privilege of life. We are indebted to Thee for all we have and are. Help us to realize daily that all of life is sacred and a part of our Father's business. Amen.

The New Dealers use the big end of the telescope in examining their egos, and the small end when examining the national debt. And this leaves the country in the middle.

Although the United States has more beauty shops than any country in the world, they've hardly scratched the surface.

Sciatica, Neuritis Treatment
Improved In Last Few Years

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

There has been a great improvement in the treatment of sciatica and neuritis in the last few years. Very important is diagnosis. I have recently seen two cases which were treated for over a year with a diagnosis of neuritis when the actual disease was obviously writer's cramp. As soon as the excessive writing which the patients did was forbidden, the condition cleared up.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Sciatica is pain along the course of the sciatic nerve, which is down the back of the leg. Almost all sciatica is secondary, either to focal infection or to dislocation of the bones in the pelvis, or pressure upon the nerve somewhere in its course. Postural defects are predisposing factors where the muscles are chronically overworked.

In treatment, the most important element probably is rest. Any motion producing pain in an inflamed nerve is harmful and increases disability. Any case in which pain is aggravated by motion should be put at complete rest until the acute stage subsides. Many cases never get well until the leg is splinted.

Other Remedies

The fact that the leg is at rest, need not prevent the use of other remedies. The hot water bag or the electric heating pad should be applied in acute cases. This relieves pain quickly and causes an increased blood supply to the part, which is one of the factors in overcoming the inflammation and restoring the nerve to normal. The use of the infra-red lamp or other forms of light is also valuable. Electric heat in the form of diathermy, which penetrates deeply into the part, is the most valuable of all and should be used where a diathermy machine is available. X-ray exposures are sometimes effective.

Besides these methods which are palliative in nature, treatment by injecting into the nerve a solution either of salt, alcohol or quinine gives, in many cases, very good results. The injection is made with a long hypodermic needle and it is possible, without making an incision, to insert the needle directly into the nerve. The injection of a solution will deaden sensibility so that pain is immediately relieved.

Orthopedic surgery is also very valuable in certain cases of sciatica. The sacro-iliac articulation may be supported or fixation of the lower spine performed in various ways.

External Agents

Of the other forms of neuritis, some are caused by external agents, such as inorganic salts of metals, notably lead arsenic and gold, and also substances used for cosmetic effect and depilatories.

The second group is due to deficiencies in diet. These deficiencies may be caused by some disease of the digestive tract which causes a limitation of diet, by underlying disease such as pernicious anemia or diabetes, or the vomiting of pregnancy, which prevents the absorption of antineuritic substances in the diet, and notably by the use of alcohol.

Alcoholic neuritis has an interesting and curious history. It was long believed that the neuritis which follows the use of alcohol was due to the action of the drug itself on the nerves. It is now known, however, that it is simply due to the fact that an alcoholic does not eat a balanced diet. In fact, he is likely to eat very little and to obtain his calories from the alcohol. It has been shown definitely that alcoholic neuritis can be prevented and cured by the administration of vitamin B, which is the substance that the alcoholic fails to ingest during his spree.

COLDS

To quickly relieve distress—rub soothing, warming Musterole on your chest, throat and back.

Musterole is NOT "just a salve." It's a "counter-irritant" containing good old-fashioned remedies for distress of colds—oil of mustard, menthol, camphor and other helpful ingredients.

That's why it gets such fine results—better than the old-fashioned mustard plaster. Musterole penetrates the surface skin, stimulates, warms and soothes and quickly helps to relieve local congestion and pain. Used by millions for 30 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. In 3 strengths: Regular, Children's (Mild) and Extra Strong. 40¢.

Theatre Attractions

Promoted to stardom in his motion picture, John Garfield, on the strength of his remarkable performance in "Four Daughters", comes to the State Theatre and Thursday in the leading role of "They Made Me a Criminal". His co-stars are the "Dead End Kids".

Ann Sheridan and John Garfield in a scene from "They Made Me a Criminal", showing tonight and Thursday at the State.

In his support are such players as Claude Rains, Gloria Dickson, Ann Sheridan and May Robson, while the lesser roles are handled by Robert Gleckler, John Hargley, Barbara Pepper, William Davidson, Ward Bond and Robert Strasser, among others.

Seen As Fighter
In the motion picture, he is a professional prize fighter. He bums his way across the country and works as a fruit picker in California.

With this background, the picture alternates between melodrama and romance and humor, most of the latter being contributed by the "Dead End" kids.

At a drunken party celebrating Garfield's winning of the world's lightweight championship, his manager kills a newspaper reporter by hitting him over the head with a bottle. Not only the manager is a sinner, but the young fighter to his training quarters and puts him to sleep there.

Runs Away
He runs away, bums his way to California and there gets a job as a desert date ranch operator by Miss Robson which is also a sort of reform school where she is trying to straighten out six tough kids—the "dead Enders."

Also at the ranch is Gloria Dickson, niece of May Robson, and Garfield falls in love with her. In trying to help her get money to keep the ranch going, he takes on a fight, which brings him into the public eye and leads to his being hunted down by the police.

At The Grand
A double feature will be seen at the Grand for the last times tonight.

School Musicians Entertain At Travelers Club Meeting

A program presented by Salem High school students entertained Travelers club members at their meeting Tuesday afternoon in the library assembly room.

Constance Clarke, William Rogers, Harvey Rickert and Louis Raymond debated on the subject, "Resolved: That the United States should form an alliance with Great Britain."

Musical numbers were: Saxophone solo, "Valse in E Flat" (Durand) Henry Pauline, accompanied by Geraldine Fickes; string trio, selections, Gusti Conja (violin) Paul Evans (cello) and Geraldine Fickes (piano); Boys Glee club, "The Night Virgil" (O'Keefe-Zamecni) and "Song of the Skaters" (Stuart-Reynard), Don Rice, George Reader, Virgil Stamp, Edward Cavanaugh, Frank Davis, Frank Stone and Margaret Carr, pianist.

Dr. C. L. Smith gave an interesting talk on "Our Own Front Door," a history of Columbiana county.

The club will have one of the outstanding meetings of the year next Tuesday when Dr. Margaret T. Douth of Pittsburgh will speak. The program will be open to the public. Friends of the club members are invited to attend.

Dr. Douth is associate professor in biology at the Pennsylvania College for Women in Pittsburgh. Although she teaches both botany and zoology, her greatest interest is in the former subject.

She is the wife of Dr. J. Kenneth Douth, curator of mammals at the Carnegie Museum in Pittsburgh, who has made many valuable contributions to the institution through his expeditions and studies.

Dr. Douth joins her husband in the summer in his expeditions for the museum.

The last two summers they have spent together in the Hudson Bay territory of northern Canada. There she collected plant specimens which she identifies and compares with local plant life for her winter's projects. The flowers and shrubs grown in the frozen north are entirely different from those of more temperate climates because the ground at all times is frozen within five feet of the surface and there are only three months in the year when anything green can live. No trees grow there at all.

Mr. and Mrs. Douth have another hobby in common—photography. She prefers stills while her husband specializes in motion pictures. They have collected through the years many excellent studies of Indians and Eskimos, as well as plant and animal life.

Dr. Douth is also interested in gardening and spends much time experimenting with unusual flowers and shrubs.

Dr. Douth, addressing the club here, will give an account of the trip she and her husband took two years ago and last year to the Hudson Bay territory. A display of Eskimo clothing implements, weapons and other curios will be shown by the speaker in connection with her talk.

Past Chiefs Plan Dessert-Bridge

The Past Chiefs association of the Pythian Sisters will entertain at a dessert bridge and "500" party in the K. of P. hall at 1:30 p. m. Thursday.

Mrs. George Barnes and Mrs. Norman Phillips are co-chairmen in charge. Prizes will be awarded winners.

The affair is open to the public.

"ENVOY EXTRAORDINARY" by E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

CHAPTER XXVI

"I do hope," Ann sighed, "that those men who are down here from Scotland Yard have not been worrying Elisabeth."

Matresser looked across at his sister with a slight frown. "Please do not get this matter wrong," he said coldly. "There is only one bona fide Scotland Yard man down—Inspector Finch—and I am sure that he has not been near Made-moiselle Stamier. The other fellow Marlow, is a different type altogether. He had a brief interview with Mademoiselle Stamier in my presence and I can answer for it that he remained entirely civil. He is dining here tonight, so for heaven's sake let everyone be polite to him!"

"I think I hear some cars in the drive," Matresser went on, listening for a moment. "I suggest that we all avoid the subject of the Ferguson death during the evening, and while I think of it—at half-past nine precisely—I shall have to go to the telephone. Yates took a message while I was out in the Park talking to the pilot."

"More mysteries?" his mother asked, with a slight uplifting of the eyebrows.

"Nothing that approaches a mystery," her son assured her. "It is this little excursion that Sir Francis wants me to undertake. I was not so keen on it, till he sent this plane down. Now I must confess that I am rather looking forward to it."

"If you were anything of a brother," Ann said reproachfully, "you would take your little sister with you. I would love to fly, if it were only to Paris."

"Next time," Matresser promised. "Here come our friends."

At precisely twenty-five minutes past nine that evening Burrows approached his master with: "I beg your lordship's pardon, but there is a call through from London on the telephone."

Matresser excused himself to his immediate neighbors and waved his hand in apology to his mother. In the study he found Henry Yates who whispered, "They have just rung up to warn that a message will be through on the private line as the clock strikes nine-thirty."

Yates was showing signs of excitement. Matresser, on the other hand, seemed entirely unaffected by the tenseness of the moment.

The idea that he was probably to be the first person in the world outside Downing Street to hear certain great news may have possessed some dramatic significance for him, but he showed no signs of it. With a glance at the clock he lit a cigaret and took his place before the table. Precisely at the half hour, the expected tinkle came.

"Francis Tring speaking from London. Is that Matresser?"

"Speaking, Sir Francis," was the clear reply.

"It is now half-past nine," the Foreign Secretary continued. "We have been in conference for five hours. We are, I honestly believe, nearing agreement but we have not reached it yet."

"What happens then?"

"We have adjourned for an hour. Some of us are dining here, others are going home for a few minutes. At a quarter past ten we reassemble. It is understood between us that we are to arrive at a decision before we separate."

"That seems sound."

"I have already received news that the plane arrived."

"Quite right. It has been here for a couple of hours."

"Norwich will keep two operators," Sir Francis went on, "holding on to the private line until we give the signal for dismissal. You are an old campaigner and I know you won't mind an all-night wait."

"I shall be within a dozen yards of the phone until it rings—say from eleven o'clock," Matresser announced.

"Capital! Things are moving in the right direction but we are all a little nervous. I have attended many of these conferences and have never known the strain like it is now.... Later on, then, Matresser."

"Later on," the latter echoed.

Matresser slipped quietly back into his place and picked up the conversation with his neighbor almost where they had left it. It happened to be a dinner of young people rather than a formal gathering and very soon his mother rose from her place and was followed from the room by the other women.

"Come along, Colonel," Matresser invited, "and you, Miller, and Marlow. There are all sorts of orgies for you young people tonight—table tennis, for one game. Pretty violent exercise, I must warn you. Bridge for the elders and billiards for the middle-aged. Two glasses of port and away we go. It is a sensible age we live in, General. He went on, as Hamilton sank into the high-backed chair by his side.

"We have got out of the arm-chair habit. Modern man is beginning to realize that there is nothing like movement for keeping young."

"That's all very well for you youngsters," the General grunted, "but what are you going to do when you find you are seated opposite a decanter of '70 port at a time of life?"

"Well, that's one temptation from which we shall be removed before long," his host reminded him. "My cellarman tells me we are on the last bin of '70's. Is it true that you are going north, General?"

"They are talking about it," was the somewhat gloomy reply.

"A hard life, a soldier's," Major Miller, acting adjutant of the regiment, remarked fingering the stem of his wineglass. "You just get used to a place and begin to feel thoroughly at home when one of those mysterious fellows behind the scenes at the War Office gives you the shove. By-the-by, Matresser, are you going to add flying to the long list of your accomplishments?"

he asked. "That's a magnificent plane in the corner of the Park there."

"No, I'm too old to take up flying," Matresser replied. "That belongs to a foreign friend who wants to take me off for a few days...."

There was a quarter of an hour's neighborly talk, then Matresser led the way into the circular lounge where coffee was being served. Without any apparent effort he started two bridge tables and the table tennis. Soon the whole party was busily engaged.... Matresser took one last look around and slipped away to his study and Henry Yates.

"All serene, Henry?" he asked, closing the door behind him.

"Quite quiet, sir. The government operator from Norwich rang up to be sure that we were still in touch and to test the line. Nothing else."

Matresser glanced at the clock. It was ten minutes to eleven.

"Shows their second session is lasting out," he meditated. "Getting nervous, Henry?"

"I don't think that I am ever that, sir," the little man replied, stroking his short beard, "but in this case I am not fully acquainted with the nature of the situation."

"Can't say any of us are. We have been drifting so long, though, that any decisive action will seem to be a renational."

"You think there will be war, sir?"

Matresser answered like a man whose thoughts were in some far-away place.

"One's fancies go for nothing at such a time. They spring up in the mind like weeds and pass with the ticking of the clock. Something is going to happen, Henry. That I am sure of. I could feel the shiver of excitement all over Europe last time I came back. What does happen will depend upon such a small decision—a tremor in Downing Street tonight, a mind that turns the wrong way in Berlin tomorrow. Anything might do it, Henry. And what a war!"

Matresser had walked to the broad window at the further end of the apartment looking across the Park. All was darkness as he stood there absorbed.

"Tell me the time, Henry," he asked without turning round.

"Five minutes to eleven."

Matresser left the window and walked down the room toward the small round table on which the telephone stood.

"I feel so foolishly futile," he confided, "shut up here in a locked room talking to myself, trying to keep calm—and yet believe me, Henry, I am aching to overwhelm those bloody-minded, slobbering so-called men of letters who sit ready to launch their flaming phrases and raucous rhetoric. They have got it all cut-and-dried. Not one yard of our beloved Empire, won by those who gave body and soul for their country, shall be parted with—"

The clock began to strike the hour. Matresser was suddenly silent. His severe mood had left him. He stood close to Yates, whose eyes were fixed upon the telephone instrument. Before the last stroke of the clock the message came.

"Norwich speaking. London on the line."

Matresser gripped the receiver which had been handed to him. "Matresser this 'end," he said calmly.

It was Sir Francis' voice husky with emotion.

"We have won, Matresser," he announced.

"Magnificent!"

"Sir Francis' voice came for a moment shrill and then again hoarse.

"At a great cost. Everyone seemed stupefied. The room is like a battlefield strewn with the corpses of mangled phrases and moral wounded hopes. Destroy your telephone connection. Leave with the dawn, or before, if the moonlight helps. Your plot will know."

Then silence.

Matresser took up a huge pair of scissors from the desk and cut the green telephone cord. His voice seemed suddenly inspired. Yates stared at him in amazement.

"Official order, Henry. Two late now for anyone to change their minds. It is only five Harmless enough is the chance meeting of these two young women apparently homeward bound after a shopping trip.

Anxious to take advantage of the opportunity to chat for a while, the diminutive blond leaves the sidewalk and starts over, intent on reaching her friend and glancing neither right nor left as she walks rapidly toward the other side.

Bearing down on his unintended victim before he has time to realize it, the motorist slams on the brakes in an attempt to avoid the collision. A quick stop is not quick enough and packages fly as the pedestrian topples.

Thrown over the fender and hurled to the street unconscious, the woman is immediately surrounded by a throng—a typical scene on Salem streets, where pedestrians are killed and injured through careless walking.—Washington Star Staff Photos, with cooperation of the American Automobile Association.

QUAKERS ELIMINATED FROM CAGE TOURNEY

Youngstown Wilson Quint Tops Salem Cagers, 27-25, In Sectional Tournament

Quakers "Off" In Shooting; Miss 12 of 15 Free Throws; Amos Dunlap Scores 19 Points To Star for Salem Team In Defeat

The curtain dropped on Salem High school's 1938-39 basketball season last night as Coach Herb Brown's Quakers fell before Youngstown Woodrow Wilson's scrappy but not-too-powerful Presidents in one of four opening games of the annual sectional Class A tournament at Youngstown East High school. The score was 27 to 25.

The defeat eliminated the Quakers from the tournament and brought to a close their 1938-39 campaign in which they won nine games and lost eight, including last night's setback.

By reason of their victory, the Presidents advance to the second round of their bracket and will meet Newton Falls in their next game Thursday night. In addition to Woodrow Wilson, Youngstown East, Youngstown Rayen and Hubbard's cagers also came through with triumphs.

East conquered Austintown Pitches, Rayen eliminated Sebring and Hubbard topped Ursuline.

An "Off Night"

Caught in the throes of an "off night" in shooting, the Quakers displayed little class in losing to their Youngstown opponent.

Score falls to indicate the listless play which marked the contest.

The Quakers held the lead at only one time during the game, this at the end of the second quarter when they pulled out in front by one point, 11 to 10. The Youngstown cagers tied the count at 11-11 at the start of the third period, then moved into a lead they held during the remainder of the game.

The Quakers tried desperately to catch up with the Presidents in the last quarter, coming within one point of tying the count late in the period, but Wilson managed to stay out in front by a slim margin.

The Presidents earned the victory by completely outplaying the Quakers in the first and third quarters. Wilson scored six points to Salem's one in the first frame and 13 points to Salem's four in the third quarter.

Coach Brown's charges dominated the scoring in the second and fourth quarters, tallying 10 points to Wilson's four in each of these periods.

Dunlap Stars

Had it not been for Amos Dunlap, diminutive Salem forward, the Quakers would undoubtedly have lost to Wilson by a wider margin of points.

It was Dunlap who kept the Quakers within threatening distance of Wilson and led the Salem lads in their second and fourth quarter rallies. He was the only Salem player who enjoyed any success in shooting, making 19 points on nine field goals and one free throw.

Dunlap turned in one of his best performances of the season and what credit the Quakers deserve for pressing Wilson in scoring is due him. His consistently hard play and fine shooting from short range was the outstanding feature of the game.

Only two other Salem players broke into the scoring. Bill Schaeffer converted one free throw, while Burton Sutter made two field goals and a foul shot for five points.

A poor performance at the foul line played a prominent part in the Quakers' downfall, although their mistakes in foul shooting was no greater than the bad luck which haunted their shots from the field. The Salem cagers were given 15 free throws during the contest, but converted only three of these.

Miss Easy Shots

Several times during the game, Salem players missed comparatively easy shots from under the basket. Schaeffer, who was playing despite a knee injury, received the last Friday night, was doing good work on rebounding, but neither he nor his teammates were able to take advantage of the scoring opportunities they received after grabbing rebounds.

A zone defense employed by the Presidents kept Schaeffer bottled up and forced the Quakers to do much of their shooting from beyond the three-point line. The Salem lads were stopped cold by the Wilson zone defense in the first quarter and not until the second period did they begin penetrating into close range.

The Quakers cracked the Presidents' zone several times by working the sides of the court, but they failed to keep up this method of attack, despite Coach Brown's instruction to keep moving in and stop using too much time with mid-court ball-handling and passing.

Wilson is deserving of considerable credit for the victory in view of the fact that the Presidents played most of the third quarter and all of the fourth period minus the services of two of their stars, Forwards Hagg and DiOrto.

Hagg, who is one of the leading scorers in Youngstown, and DiOrto were ousted from the game in the third quarter for committing too many fouls.

Easy Shooting

Wilson enjoyed easy sailing in the first quarter when its zone defense halted the Quakers' attack and prevented the Salem lads from getting from the field. The Quakers made only one point in the first quarter while Wilson rang up three goals to lead 6 to 1 at the close of the opening period.

Wilson boosted its lead to 8 to 1 at the start of the second quarter, but shortly after the Quakers started a rally which enabled them to gain the lead, 11 to 10, at halftime. Dunlap opened the rally early in the second frame and made all but one of the Quakers 10 points in this period.

The Presidents came to life in the third quarter, and after tying the score at 11-11, they hit a fast scoring pace to tally 13 points to Salem's four in this frame. Wilson led 22 to 15 at the close of the third quarter.

With Dunlap playing the lead role, Salem sliced the Wilson lead to two points, 23 to 21, during the fourth quarter. Wilson collected a foul shot to move ahead by three points, 24 to 21, but Dunlap put the Quakers back in the game with a field goal which cut the Presidents lead to 24 to 23.

In the last two minutes of play, McAuley hit on a field goal to boost the Presidents lead to 26 to 23. Again Salem threatened when Dunlap dropped in a short shot to slice Wilson's lead to 26 to 25. With less than a half-minute remaining, Rhodes converted a foul shot to put the game on ice for the Presidents.

McGaffie Leads Scoring In Salem's Second Half Rally

Rallying in the second half after being held on even terms in the first half, Salem High school freshmen cagers swamped Alliance High freshmen, 38 to 24, at the Salem gym Tuesday afternoon.

The Alliance frosh remained even with Salem in the first half which ended with the score deadlocked at 13-all, but failed to keep pace with the Quaker freshmen in the second half.

McGaffie displayed uncanny shooting accuracy from the corners to lead the scoring for Salem with 10 points, made on five field goals. Miller, Buckman and Umberger contributed heavily to the local scoring.

The players who saw action for the Salem team were members of the High school reserve squad this season.

SALEM SPORTS PROGRAM BEST, DIRECTOR SAYS

High School Athletics Are Most Extensive In State

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is another story written by Everett (Bud) Dean, senior student at Salem High school, who is combining practical experience with training received in a journalism course at the High school.

BY BUD DEAN

The intramural sports program at Salem High is the most extensive of any school in the state.

This fact was revealed today by Lewis Smith, co-ordinator of athletics and dean of boys at High school.

The object of intramural sports is to provide recreation and physical development for all boys in school.

"Athletics for all" is the slogan of the Salem program.

The sports being conducted are: touch-football in the fall, basketball following football and volleyball, softball, and ping-pong following basketball. Smith doesn't believe it helps varsity sports but merely supplements the Memorial building in taking care of the young people of Salem.

Boxing and Wrestling

Carl P. Schroeder, head football coach, is offering anyone who is interested, the opportunity to participate in boxing and wrestling. He now has an enthusiastic group meeting several times a week.

Frank Gordon, Junior varsity football coach, is handling the Junior High intramural program, while Joe Kelley is taking charge of the grade school program.

Fred Cope, track coach, also aids the sports activities by sponsoring an interclass track meet in the spring.

Variety of Boys

Smith has found that the same boys do not participate in all the sports offered but that throughout the entire program they get a great variety of boys. However, Smith says there are a few boys who take part in all the sports.

At the present time, basketball is the sport in which the boys are participating. It will last until the middle of March when softball will get underway.

Smith departs from the usual order in running his program. In most schools teams are chosen by home rooms but in the Salem organization, Smith chooses the captains and then allows them to select their own teams.

This quality, Smith believes, creates and maintains interest. To cite an example of how evenly matched the teams are, last week three out of five games went into overtime periods.

Lack of Time is Big Problem

Teachers Loren Early of the High school, and Robert Carey of the Junior High assist Smith in supervising the basketball program. Their aim is to have each boy play twice a week. The big problems are that they have to take the gym at a poor time and that it is difficult to get good officials. The captains pick their own officials and often do not use good judgment.

Winners of first and second rounds will meet in a playoff. The champions of each of the four leagues will receive emblems. Smith hopes to sponsor an interclass tournament at the close of the season.

Four Leagues In Action

The intramural basketball program consists of four leagues: A, B, C, and Suburban totaling 27 teams with six and seven players to a team. All leagues, but Suburban which plays its games at noon, play on Mondays and Thursdays from 7:30 to 9:30 and Tuesdays and Wednesdays from 7:30 to 10:00.

Names of teams and their captains follow: Class A: Procrastinators, D. Rich; Saxons, B. Schaeffer; Sultans, Whitcomb; Dedenkids, Syppko; Redcats, Vickers; Hoosiers, Balsey; Panthers, Hutcherson; Greasers, D. Beck; Clowns, Roberts. Class B: Satans, Hansell; Buckeyes, D. Freed; Ravens, Benedict; Panthers, Bolinger; Wildcats, Williams; Tigers, Zoccolato; Termites, Greene; Five Aces, Limpose; Pirates, Stewart. Class C: Eagles, Boughton; Falcons, Ellis; Aviators, Blische; Comets, Rance. Suburban: Deadeyes, Tary; Warriors, Kloos, Reds, Kovash; Suckers, Doyle.

The Barons, Falcons, Redcats and Reds were first round winners in their respective leagues.

Althouse Juniors Beaten At Warren

The Althouse Motors Juniors went down to defeat at Warren last night, losing to the Vornia A. C. Juniors, 28 to 18, in a one-sided basketball game.

The Warren team led throughout the game after taking a seven-point lead in the first quarter. Balsey paced the Salem scoring with nine points.

Conference Speaker

ALLIANCE, March 1—Dr. Karl Leebrick, president of Kent State university, will be one of the principal speakers at the student conference of world Christianity to be sponsored by the campus Y. M. C. A. at Mt. Union college March 3-5.

MIAMI, Fla.—The fleet of clipper ships flying between here and Latin America broke all records in 1938 when a total of 73,919 passengers were carried, Pan American Airways officials announced.

BOWLING RESULTS

The lead held by Kelly's Service Station in the National League was cut from three games to one at the Masonic temple alleys last night as Fitzpatrick & Strain won two heats with the Service keggers while the second-place Salem News was taking three games from the Metzger Hotel.

Kelly's have now won 47 games and lost 19, while the News has won 46 games and lost 20.

No changes were made in the standings in other National League matches which saw the Moose take two out of three games from the Masons and Bloomberg's win three heats from Whitehead Products on a forfeit.

In the City Duckpin league at the Grate Recreation alleys, the E. W. Bliss Co. remained far out in front by winning two of three games with Sheen's Super Service.

The Pottery climbed from a tie for third place into a tie for second position by winning two out of three games with the Colonial Billiards.

In other duckpin matches, Sartin's Cigars won two of three games with Art the Jeweler and the Bliss Pattern Shop took two out of three heats with the Salem Builders.
